Headwinds Cause New Home Sales to Dip to More Normal Levels, North State BIA Reports

April new home sales in the Sacramento region dipped from the red-hot level recorded in March, but still was the second-highest April total since 2006, the North State Building Industry Association reported.

BIA members reported selling 496 new homes during the month, compared to 760 in April 2021 and 839 in March of this year. Part of the slowdown was likely caused by a significant reduction in people visiting new home communities the week before Easter, as sales dipped the weeks before and after the holiday before rebounding during the last week of the month. Rising mortgage interest rates and continued supply-chain problems also were a factor.

Still, demand for new homes remains strong, as April's total was the second-highest for that month since 682 sales were reported in 2006. Adam Hieb, the BIA's 2022 Chairman, said he expects the market to remain active.

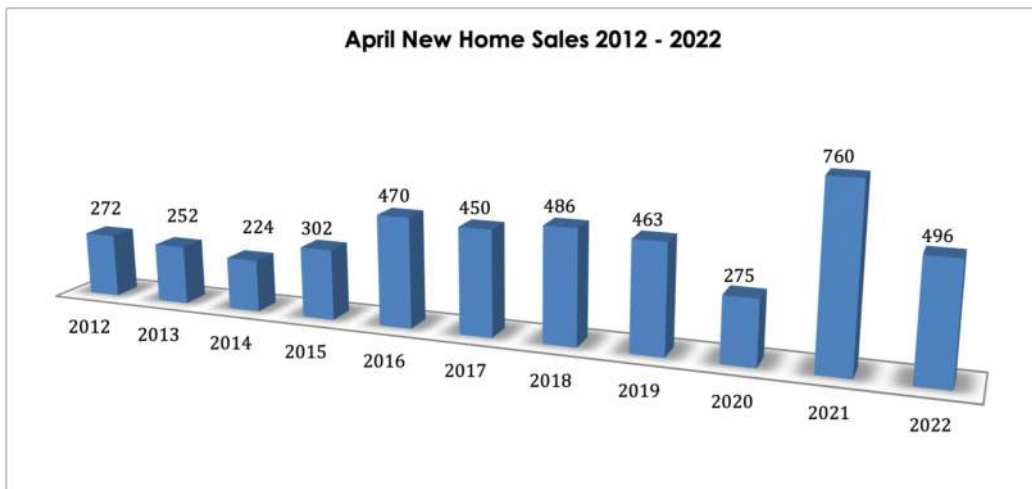

"The housing market is facing some headwinds due to rising interest rates and continued supply-chain challenges, but builders are still seeing a strong demand for new homes in the Sacramento area," Hieb said. "This is a great place to live and work and because many people are still able to work from home, we expect demand will remain strong."

Michael Strech, the BIA’s President and CEO, also noted that area buyers have more choices than they’ve had for years as an average 198 new home communities were open for business during the month – and that figure hit the 200 mark during the last week of the month for the first time since 2008.

“The market is adjusting, but builders are also bringing new product online designed to meet what today’s buyers are looking for,” Strech said.

Sales figures cover Sacramento, Placer, El Dorado, Yolo, Yuba, Sutter, Amador and Nevada counties.
